MATT AJUL, NATIONAL FEATURES EDITOR

As we enter the cold and dreary season, the snowfall and frigid temperatures probably aren't making most people happy — unless they happen to be avid skiers. The early winter weather has been a blessing in disguise for New England, as it's allowed local ski resorts to open early for the season. Before you dust off your skis and hit the slopes, check out our guide to the region's top skiing destinations, and stay up-to-date all winter long at metro.us/things-to-do/boston.

WELCOME TO
METRO BOSTONUS CABLE TV AND NETFLIX
DIAL UP CHRISTMAS FARE

L Pour the eggnog, decorate the tree and turn on the TV. Like glinting tinsel in a sea of dark TV dramas, the number of new, feel-good Christmas movies offered by U.S. cable TV networks and the global streaming service Netflix is off the charts. Among roughly five dozen original offerings this season are "Hometown Christmas," "Christmas at Graceland," "My Christmas Inn" and "A Shoe Addict's Christmas." Demand was so high, many had to be filmed in summer heat, with fake snow and digital winter effects. "Everything has blown up. I can't believe how much Christmas stuff is going on this year and next year," said Andrew Gernhard, whose company, Synthetic Cinema International, has produced movies for the Hallmark and Lifetime cable channels and others. These types of films, which promise snow, mistletoe and a love story, used to be largely limited to networks like Hallmark and Lifetime. This year, Netflix is releasing three new Christmas romances, Walt Disney Co.'s Freeform network is airing three of its own, and the TV One channel has two on its schedule.

MANAFORT DENIES MEET WITH WIKILEAKS' ASSANGE

2 President Donald Trump's former campaign manager, Paul Manafort, staunchly denied ever meeting with Wikileaks founder Julian Assange on Tuesday, after the Guardian newspaper published a story alleging the two met at least three times, including once in 2016. "This story is totally false and deliberately libelous. I have never met Julian Assange or anyone connected to him," Manafort said through a spokesman. "We are considering all legal options against the Guardian, who proceeded with this story even after being notified by my representatives that it was false." Manafort's statement came one day after Special Counsel Robert Mueller's office told a federal judge that Manafort had breached his plea agreement by lying repeatedly to the FBI despite pledging to cooperate with the probe. In the same court filing, Manafort denied lying, but both sides agreed the court should move ahead and set a date to sentence him for his crimes. Prosecutors said they plan to file a report before sentencing laying out the alleged crimes Manafort committed after pleading guilty in September.

BEHIND THE SCENES AT THE V&A'S
CAST COURTS RE-OPENING

3 A conservator works on one half of a cast of the Roman "Trajan's Column" memorial at a press preview of the Cast Courts at the Victoria and Albert Museum on Nov. 27, 2018, in London, England. The re-launched gallery area exhibits casts and reproductions of important historical artifacts from around the world and opens to the public on Dec. 1, 2018.

CREATOR OF 'SPONGEBOB
SQUAREPANTS' DEAD AT 57

4 "SpongeBob SquarePants" creator Stephen Hillenburg, who brought the zany cartoon marine underworld of Bikini Bottom to television, the movies and the stage, has died at the age of 57, the Nickelodeon television network said on Tuesday. Hillenburg had said last year that he was suffering from the neurodegenerative disease ALS, also known as Lou Gehrig's disease. He died on Monday. "We are incredibly saddened by the news that Steve Hillenburg has passed away following a battle with ALS," the network said in a statement. "He was a beloved friend and longtime creative partner to everyone at Nickelodeon, and our hearts go out to his entire family." Hillenburg was a marine biology teacher in Southern California when he started creating sea creatures as teaching tools. The first episode of "SpongeBob SquarePants," featuring a cheerful yellow sea sponge who lived in an underwater pineapple, aired on U.S. television in May 1999. The series went on to win multiple awards and be made into two Hollywood movies and a Broadway musical. The television series has aired in more than 200 nations and has been translated into more than 60 languages.

MICROSOFT TO OVERTAKE
APPLE IN VALUATION

5 Microsoft is close to dethroning Apple as Wall Street's most valuable company. This comes just four months after Apple made headlines for being the first company to breach the $1 trillion mark. Apple is under pressure after U.S. President Donald Trump told The Wall Street Journal that he could slap tariffs on laptops and mobile phones imported from China. Apple and Microsoft are both worth $814 billion. Wedbush analyst Daniel Ives said, "In the near-term, this string of bad news continues to add to the dark clouds over Cupertino's head and thus will weigh on shares." Apple has taken heavier blows than other Silicon Valley stars, falling 23 percent since Nov. 1, when it warned investors that sales for the key holiday quarter would likely fall short of Wall Street's targets. What's more, global demand for smartphones has slowed in recent years. Eight years ago, it was smartphones that helped Apple overtake Microsoft in market capitalization. The Windows software maker then struggled with slow demand for PCs. But Microsoft bounced back, reducing its reliance on Windows and becoming a major player in cloud computing after Satya Nadella took over the helm four years ago.

BARCC launches web chat hotline to support more sexual assault survivors

An online chat hotline makes the Boston Area Rape Crisis Center's services more accessible to a wider population of survivors.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

With more sexual assault survivors reaching out for support, the Boston Area Rape Crisis Center (BARCC) has launched a web-based chat hotline service to make its resources more accessible.

BARCC provides free, confidential support and services for sexual violence survivors. It's seen a spike in people reaching out lately as the #MeToo movement gained attention and the topic of sexual assault took over the news cycle around Brett Kavanaugh's Supreme Court nomination.

In the week following Dr. Christine Blasey Ford's testimony, BARCC saw a 366 percent increase in calls to its phone hotline. The first day after her testimony, BARCC volunteers answered a regular day's worth of calls by 11 a.m.

BARCC hopes the launch of the chat hotline can help meet this need, making the rape crisis center more accessible for all kinds of sexual assault survivors.

"There are people who may have limited access to phones or no private space to talk, so the hotline is not available to them," said Sharon Imperato, BARCC Clinical Innovation Projects and Training Director. "A lot of people have a discomfort or fear of talking on the phone. There's something about saying what you're experiencing versus writing it — a lot of people are more comfortable when writing, and they're able to articulate themselves more."

The BARCC chat hotline will be a resource for those who are deaf or hard of hearing, she added, and for survivors who are nonverbal or have speech disabilities. People who have disabilities are at a higher risk of experiencing sexual violence, Imperato noted.

Younger people may be more inclined to reach out through the chat hotline as well since they're often more comfortable communicating online rather than on the phone. The online option may also better reach male and transgender survivors, Imperato added, as they are more likely to use web-based resources.

"These are the populations that are not really thought of when we think of survivors. They're wanting to feel things out first and might feel better reaching out to an online hotline."

"I can definitely say we do see an increase in people reaching out during holidays."

Sharon Imperato, BARCC Clinical Innovation Projects and Training director

The launch of the chat hotline comes not only as more people have been reaching out to BARCC, but also as the crisis center anticipates a flood of sexual assault survivors seeking support around the holidays.

"I've been doing this work for a long time. I can definitely say we do see an increase in people reaching out during holidays," said Imperato.

Most people who experience sexual violence experience it by someone that they know, according to Imperato. Going home for the holidays may mean that a sexual assault survivor comes into contact with their abuser or people who know their abuser. They could also be revisiting a place where sexual assault occurred, which could trigger an intense response.

Holidays also disrupt a survivor's support network, Imperato said.

The chat hotline is a new extension of that support. BARCC's online chat hotline is available at barcc.org/chat from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily, and offered in addition to the telephone hotline, which is available 24/7 at 800-841-8371.

Mysterious illness paralyzing children on the rise in US

A mysterious disease called acute flaccid myelitis (AFM) has affected 116 people in 31 states this year, federal health officials said Monday.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Monday that 2018 is on track for a record-high diagnosis rate for the little-understood syndrome.

The syndrome is a paralyzing disease, causing children to lose the ability to move their face, neck, back, arms or legs. The symptoms also include drooping face and eyelids, difficulty moving eyes and swallowing, and slurred speech. In severe cases, patients have had trouble breathing because of weak muscles.

About 120 cases were confirmed in 2014, the first time such a wave occurred. Another 149 were reported in 2016. The illnesses have spiked in September each year and then tailed off significantly by November, but this year the number has kept growing, the CDC reported.

No one has died from AFM this year, but CDC officials said that at least half the patients do not recover from the paralysis and some have serious complications.

The CDC still doesn't have a confirmed cause of AFM, which is marked by muscle weakness or paralysis caused by damage to the spinal cord, though the damage is the type often caused by viruses.

Although the majority of patients have not tested positive for one specific virus, a family of viruses called enteroviruses is a prime suspect.

Parents and even some scientists have criticized the agency for not solving the riddle.

"I understand why parents are frustrated. I'm frustrated and I want answers, too," said the CDC's Dr. Nancy Messonnier, who is overseeing the agency's outbreak investigation.

If you notice a sudden onset of arm or leg weakness and loss of muscle tone and reflexes following a fever in your child, seek medical care immediately. ANNA HARSTEDT

Retail scams to be aware of while shopping for the holidays

'Tis the season for good deals and potential fraud.

ANNA HARSTEDT
letters@metro.us

The holidays are a prime time for shopping and finding good deals, but also the perfect opportunity for bad actors to scam customers.

Amid the holiday-shopping bustle, hundreds of apps and websites will be trying to steal personal data and credit card information, according to a new report from RiskIQ, a cybersecurity company.

Scammers create fake landing pages with realistic branding often offering a big amount of discount to attract customers, especially around big events and holidays, with the goal of collecting a customer's personal data.

Before this year's Black Friday, a scam circulated on the messaging app

GETTY IMAGES

WhatsApp that promised a 99 percent discount on Amazon.com purchases, resulting in thousands of customers having their credit card information stolen — one of the many scams that circulated online ahead of the popular shopping day.

More people are using their phones instead of a computer to shop online. This year, 40 percent of Black Friday sales were made via a smartphone, according to OuterBox.

Shopping on a smartphone may seem effective and simple, but it also puts the customer at a much higher risk of being scammed.

"On a smartphone, compared to on a computer, it's much harder to spot a scam since mobile browsers have a much shorter [URL] address field and therefore may not see the full URL," the RiskIQ study reads.

"If a random website is offering an 80 percent off deal on the toy of the season, there's a good chance they're just looking to take your credit card information," the report reads.

To avoid visiting bad websites, you should look for "https" in the retailer's website, rather than "http." (The "s" stands for secure and means all communications between your browser and the website are encrypted.)

Avoid using public Wi-Fi when shopping online. When using public Wi-Fi, anyone with computer acumen can view what you are browsing and steal your personal information.

Using a credit card instead of a debit card limits your liability since the money isn't taken directly out of a checking account.

Consider signing up for free scam alerts from the Federal Trade Commission at ftc.gov/scams, which tracks spear-phishing scams, charity fraud, credit report scams and more.

Faulty alert caused shooter scare at Walter Reed hospital: US Navy

A false report of an active shooter at the Walter Reed military hospital outside Washington led people to take shelter on Tuesday, before an all-clear was given and the U.S. Navy confirmed the incident was related to a drill.

In preparations for the drill, a mass notification alert was mistakenly sent to people at Naval Support Activity Bethesda, the military base that houses the medical center, the Navy said in a statement.

The notification did not contain the words "exercise" or "drill," which prompted workers to respond as if an active shooter actually was at the facility, the Navy said.

Police swept at least one building after receiving the report about a possible shooter around 2:23 p.m.

People at the medical center, including a U.S. congressman, sheltered in place for at least 30 minutes, while the base urged others to find cover inside vehicles or buildings as a precaution.

"I am currently at Walter Reed Medical in Bethesda where we've been told there is an active shooter," U.S. Representative Dutch Ruppersberger wrote on Twitter at one point. "I am currently safe in a conference room w/ approx 40 others."

The base gave the "all clear" around 3:20 p.m. It said in a Facebook post that no active shooter was found.

Walter Reed National Military Medical Center is the largest joint military hospital in the United States, specializing in care for veterans of the U.S. Navy and Army and their families. It provides care to more than 1 million beneficiaries per year. REUTERS

TripSavvy shares its favorite spots to hit the slopes.

MATT JUUL
matthew.juul@metro.us

The cold and snowy weather may be a pain for travelers this holiday season, but it's a blessing for outdoor enthusiasts looking to hit the slopes as soon as possible. Ski resorts throughout the region are benefiting from the recent wave of snowfall and frigid temperatures, which means they can get a head start on opening their doors this year. Since the 2018-2019 ski season is already in full swing, it's time to explore the best ski resorts in New England so you can plan out your next mountain adventure. The popular travel site TripSavvy has shared its roundup of the Northeast's top ski destinations; not surprisingly, New England hot spots dominate the list.

Bretton Woods

Located in the White

Mountains of New Hampshire, this fan-favorite spot is the largest ski area in the state, featuring 464 acres for skiing and snowboarding on 62 trails. In addition to its various ski offerings,

Bretton Woods is also a great place to visit for a number of other winter activities, including zip-lining and dogsledding. 99 Ski Area Rd., Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, brettonwoods.com

Jiminy Peak

You don't have to leave the Bay State in order to have some winter fun. The Berkshires' own Jiminy Peak is a top destination for avid skiers and snowboarders. The Hancock hot spot is also home to a massive mountain coaster, the first of its kind in the U.S., as well as a "Soaring Eagle" zip ride. 37 Corey Rd., Hancock, jiminypeak.com

Killington

No list of the best ski resorts in New England would be complete without mentioning "The Beast of the East." The Vermont destination is a favorite among professional and amateur skiers, and is also home to the annual Killington Cup, which features some of the top athletes going head-to-head on the slopes each Thanksgiving weekend. "For groups of friends, we always recommend Killington," says TripSavvy general manager Molly Fergus. "The Beast of the East" has 212 trails — the most on the East Coast — and one of the best après scenes in the region, including the legendary steakhouse and nightclub combo, The Wobbly Barn. 4763 Killington Rd., Killington, Vermont, killington.com

Loon Mountain

Another beloved spot along New Hampshire's White Mountains, Loon is a great destination for the whole family. Stop by to hit the slopes or enjoy a day of snow tubing, zip lines and other family-friendly activities. 60 Loon Mountain Rd., Lincoln, New Hampshire, loonmtn.com

Reasons to visit Smugglers' Notch this winter

New England has no shortage of great skiing destinations, especially in the Green Mountain State. But one of the most popular spots in Vermont has to be Smugglers' Notch. Here are three reasons why you should plan a ski trip to Smugglers' Notch this winter.

All skiers are welcome

Whether you're a novice or a veteran of the slopes, Smugglers' Notch is perfect for skiers of all skill levels, as it features over a thousand skiable acres. Advanced adventurers can test their mettle on the more difficult courses, such as the "Black Hole," a bumpy piece of terrain that's a triple black diamond, the only one of its kind in the Northeast. If you're more of a newbie, don't worry, as Smugglers' Notch has a ski and ride school called Snow Sport University to show you the ropes.

Kid-friendly fun

Consistently named the top family-friendly resort by SKI Magazine, Smugglers' Notch is the perfect destination for parents who want to hit the slopes with their kids. In addition to its ski school, Smugglers' Notch has a special childcare center on-site called Treasures, which has everything your little ones need to have fun on their next ski trip. There's also a family "Fun Zone," featuring arcade games, laser tag and more.

Mountainside feasts

You'll probably work up quite the appetite after a day on the slopes. Luckily, Smugglers' Notch has plenty of great spots to grab a bite, such as the Morse Mountain Grille & Pub, Riga-Bello's Pizzeria and The Hearth & Candle. Guests can also fuel up at The Green Mountain Deli or, in true Vermont fashion, indulge on snacks from the Ben & Jerry's Scoop Shop. MATT JUUL

Bruins doing their best to survive early slew of injuries

The B's have been gutted by the injury bug all season.

RICHARD SLATE
sports@metro.us

In Bruins GM Don Sweeney's most vivid nightmares, he probably never envisioned a start to the season quite like the one Boston (13-7-4) has experienced in 2018-19.

Between the endless injuries to key players and struggles both on and off the ice of their starting goaltender, these issues would have broken a lesser team by now. An unexpected benefit from all of this drama is that younger players and those with a smaller role have been able to be tested right off the bat with more ice time heaped on their collective plates through the first quarter of the campaign.

Head coach Bruce Cassidy doesn't have much left to prove here, but this extended absence of stars like defensemen Zdeno Chara (MCL) and Charlie McAvoy (concussion), not to mention center Patrice Bergeron (ribs and sternum) have proven once again that Cassidy is one of the top bench bosses in the NHL since game after game, his undermanned team has shown up and often earned some unexpected points against quality opponents.

Bruins head coach Bruce Cassidy has done well to keep the Bruins afloat despite an onslaught of injuries. GETTY IMAGES

This past week was a perfect example of the scrappy nature of this edition of the Black and Gold that has already endeared themselves to fans. Boston is 3-1-2 in its last six games and on the night before Thanksgiving, they lost 3-2 in overtime at Detroit (10-11-3). They regrouped on the holiday and came out on Black Friday with a workman-like 2-1 overtime victory over Pittsburgh (9-8-5) thanks to center Joakim Nordstrom's tally.

They followed that up with perhaps their most impressive performance of this season: a thrilling 3-2 win at Montreal (11-8-5) on Saturday night, that both avenged an earlier 3-0 loss at TD Garden to the Canadiens a month earlier and propelled them ahead of their chief rival in the Wild Card standings. It also delivered a spark of life to a Bruins-Canadiens rivalry that has been lacking its typical emotion in the last few seasons.

A 4-2 loss in Toronto (17-8-0) on Monday could hardly sour things since the Bruins didn't play that poorly (outshooting the Leafs 40-31), it's more like they didn't get some key bounces to go their way while playing a third game in four days.

"We played hard, you're not going to win every game," admitted Cassidy. "I thought we generated lots of offensive zone time and chances in front of their goaltender. There are always good things, tonight more than most nights when you lose. I thought we probably deserved a better fate but their goaltender (Frederik Andersen) was excellent."

Speaking of standings, it is a proven fact that if your team is in playoff position by Thanksgiving, you have a very good chance to make the post-season that spring. The Atlantic Division looks better than expected with Tampa Bay (17-6-1) still playing like one of the best teams in hockey while Buffalo (16-6-2) is perhaps the biggest surprise in the league.

Still, it has to be a good sign for the Bruins that if they just tread water while all these top players are out, things should improve once they start to return to action. Nobody has had worse injury luck than defenseman Kevan Miller (2 assists, plus-6 in 11 games) who missed more than a month with a hand injury then managed to appear in four games before leaving Monday after taking a puck to the throat. Boston hosts the Islanders (12-9-2) on Thursday (7, NESN) and the Red Wings on Saturday night (7, NESN).

Celtics look ready to break out of early-season slump

The Celtics completed one of their more impressive victories of the young season Monday night as they toppled Anthony Davis and the Pelicans, 124-107, in New Orleans. That win, coupled with the fact that the C's have a ridiculously easy stretch in their schedule over the next three weeks, should ease all that turmoil that's built up since late October.

This is the Celtics' schedule through Dec. 19: home vs. Cleveland, at Minnesota, home vs. New York, at Chicago, home vs. New Orleans, at Washington, home vs. Atlanta, at Detroit, and home vs. Phoenix. Those teams have a combined 62-117 record.

Brad Stevens will

Gordon Hayward has been inconsistent after returning from injury. GETTY IMAGES surely use these next few weeks as a time to get his team "right," particularly Gordon Hayward and Jaylen Brown.

Hayward has been wildly inconsistent so far this season as he is still finding his sea legs since that gruesome season-ending injury 13 months ago. He scored a season-high 19 points in a home loss to the Knicks the night before Thanksgiving but looked out of sorts Monday night against the Pelicans as he tallied just five points in 23 minutes of play.

Brown, meanwhile, missed the New Orleans game due to a tailbone injury. For what it's worth, the Celtics are 2-0 this season when Brown doesn't play.

The third-year man is averaging 11.1 points and 1.3 assists per game this season, both down from his 14.5 and 1.6 averages a season ago.
